Procedure

1. Divide children into pairs. Give 1 child in each pair a plastic knife and a snack item.
2. The child with the knife is the host and the one to cut the snack item, which is to be shared by the pair. The other child is the guest.
3. After items are cut, explain that the person who did not do the cutting (the guest) gets to select the first piece.
4. Ask:
   - How did it feel to be the one cutting?
   - How did it feel to choose the piece you wanted?
   - Why should the guest always get to choose first?
   - What did you learn about yourself during this activity?

Hints

- Soft items, like snack-size candy bars or bananas, work best.
- This could be an introduction for a lesson on the etiquette of being a good host.
